FOREWORD

Rudyard Kipling once said that there were five magic lines of poetry in the English language, and that three of these were to be found in Coleridge's "Kubla Khan." Though many people think the exotic imagery employed by Coleridge in this poem was evidence of a purposeless activity of his unconscious, others prefer to see a meaning in his symbolism. In this volume of the "White Heather," we have presented an interpretation of "Kubla Khan," based on the John Vassos' edition of the poem.

KUBLA KHAN

In Xanadu did Kubla Khan
A stately pleasure-dome decree!
Where Alph, the sacred river, ran
Through caverns measureless to man
Down to a sunless sea.
So twice five miles of fertile ground
With walls and towers were girdled round:
And here were gardens bright with sinuous rills,
Where blossomed many an incense-bearing tree,
And here were forests ancient as the hills,
Enfolding sunny spots of greenery.
But oh! that deep romantic chasm which slanted
Down the green hill athwart a cedarn cover!
A savage place! as holy and enchanted
As e'er beneath a waning moon was haunted
By woman wailing for her demon-lover!
And from this chasm, with ceaseless turmoil seething,
As if this earth in fast thick pants were breathing,
A mighty fountain momently was forced,
Amid whose swift half-intermitted burst
Huge fragments vaulted like rebounding hail,
Or chaffy grain beneath the thresher's flail:
And 'mid these dancing rocks at once and ever
It flung up momently the sacred river.
Five miles meandering with a mazy motion
Through wood and dale the sacred river ran,
Then reached the caverns measureless to man,
And sank in tumult to a lifeless ocean:
And 'mid the tumult Kubla heard from far
Ancestral voices prophesying war!
The shadow of the dome of pleasure
Floated midway on the waves;
Where was heard the mingled measure
From the fountain and the caves.
It was a miracle of rare device,
A sunny pleasure-dome with caves of ice!
A damsel with a dulcimer
In a vision once I saw:
It was an Abyssinian maid,
And on her dulcimer she played,
Singing of Mount Abora.
Could I revive within me
Her symphony and song,
To such a deep delight 'twould win me,
That with music loud and long,
I would build that dome in air,
That sunny dome! those caves of ice!
And all who heard should see them there,
And all should cry, Beware! Beware!
His flashing eyes, his floating hair!
Weave a circle round him thrice,
And close your eyes with holy dread,
For he on honey dew hath fed,
And drunk the milk of Paradise.

The COLLEGE

In Xanadu

Among the last lines that Coleridge read before he fell into the sleep in which these images came to him, were the following: "In Xamdu did Cublai Can build a stately palace." These expressions, which lingered in his unconscious, find utterance in the first verses of the poem.

Kubla Khan is man—perhaps abstractly used to mean the human race, or more specifically, Coleridge himself. Xanadu, with all its unfathomed mystery, represents the dwelling place of Kubla's soul—with the "stately pleasure dome" as his dimly seen vision of infinity.

Oh, Professor!

The CLASSES

Where Alph . . .

Where Alph, the sacred river, ran
Through caverns measureless to man
Down to a sunless sea.

It is thought that Coleridge fashioned the name Alph from that of Alpheus, the legendary river of antiquity, that sank beneath the earth to an underground sea, and rose again in a famous fountain. In "Bartram's Travels," he had read vivid accounts of lovely gardens in which was eternal Spring; and descriptions of mighty fountains which hurled themselves forth from the depths of the earth.

The sacred river, Alph, represents the flowing, rising and sinking of the many experiences and sensations that compose man's existence. This river, running through "cavern's measureless to man"—the unknown recesses of man's soul—rushes "down to a sunless sea," which is oblivion, or death.

Man's everyday existence is the "twice five miles of fertile ground" which is enclosed by "walls and towers," his limitations in knowledge and understanding. The loveliness and pleasures of the material world are represented by the "gardens bright with sinuous rills" and "sunny spots of greenery."

Now in the second stanza we have a change of thought. Kubla ceases to contemplate earthly pleasures, and lets his mind speculate on the abstract wonder of life. Life is created in "that deep romantic chasm," "a savage place," savage because it is inevitable nd unchangeable, the womb of creatian. Demon lover and woman, spirit and matter unite, and "a mighty fountain momently is forced"—life itself.

ORGANIZATIONS

And from this chasm . . .

And from this chasm, with ceaseless turmoil seething,
As if this earth in fast thick pants were breathing,
A mighty fountain momently was forced,

In this fountain which materializes as the stream of life, important and unimportant things—"huge fragments" and "chaffy grain"—are carried along alike. "Five miles meandering with mazy motion," man's life shows its purposelessness and incoherency, because of his fears and superstitions. Notwithstanding its forceful origin, it is destined "to sink in tumult to a lifeless ocean."

PUBLICATIONS

Amid whose swift half-intermitted burst
Huge fragments vaulted like rebounding
hail,
Or chaffy grain beneath the thresher's
flail:
And 'mid these dancing rocks at once and ever
It flung up momently the sacred river.

Flora Macdonald Christian Association

"Let no man despise thy youth: but be thou an example of the believer, inward, in conversation, in charity, in spirit, in faith, in purity." I Timothy 4:12. This is the standard held before the members of the Flora Macdonald Christian Association as it endeavors to lead students to faith in God, the Father, through Jesus Christ, His Son and Our Savior. It further seeks to promote their growth in Christian faith and character and to influence them to devote themselves in united effort with all Christians in making the will of Christ effective in human society.

ATHLETICS

And 'mid this tumult . . .

And 'mid this tumult Kubla heard from far
Ancestral voices prophesying war!

As Kubla Khan's body succumbs to death, his spirit revolts. "Ancestral voices prophesying war" tell him that death is inevitable, but his spirit hears in them the echoes of the struggles of finite and infinite, spirit and matter.

Pete Harlan
Captain

The Senior Hockey Team carried away all the laurels this fall, winning every game played. The last game of the season with the Sophomores was the most exciting. The Seniors defeated their opponents with a two to one victory. In the last quarter they showed that determined spirit for which they are noted and twice put the ball over for a goal. The most outstanding features of all their games were the swiftness and skill of the forward line, and the stubborn defense of the back.

Junior Hockey

Scores

Junior	2	Senior	3
Junior	5	Freshman	0

Few in numbers, but energetic and lively, the Juniors kept their opponents on their toes—and off the ball. No matter where a hopeful player would shift, a Junior was there to cover her. The forward line especially showed keen team spirit, shooting the ball back and forth down the field, gaining ground steadily. The whole team showed a fine fighting spirit and should certainly be no easy foe next season.

Mary Moore McLaughlin
Captain

"We're cheering for you Sophomore Team." You showed some streaks of good playing this year, and it took your "Big Sisters" to lick you.

The team improved in its team work over last year. The coöperation of its halfbacks was particularly noticeable. Much pressure was put on the wings, who could be depended upon when it came to carrying the ball. The Sophomores have the making of a splendid team. Give it another season to work up its team work, and watch its speed!

LOUISE LONG
Captain

Freshman Hockey

Scores

Freshman	2	Senior	5
Freshman	0	Junior	5
Freshman	1	Sophomore	3

The Freshmen turned out in good number for hockey practice last fall. There was much interest taken in the sport, and the players worked hard at every scrimmage. Of course, they were faced with the usual Freshman problem of lack of experience among the players. However, they turned out a good team that furnished keen competition for the rest of the classes. The players were not lacking in enthusiasm, and they were well backed by the Freshman cheering section.

Senior Basketball

NELLIE KELLY
Captain

In the last basketball season of their career the seniors did some playing worthy of the occasion. The deadly aim of the senior forwards was the most noteworthy feature of the whole tournament, and they rolled up the scores. The team was always on its toes and, from the first toss-up, played hard and fast throughout the game. It was handicapped in its lack of substitutes to send in the last quarters when the players showed laxness. On the whole the seniors had a successful season, meeting only once with defeat.

Junior Basketball

Although the Juniors were not on the "up" this season, they did some playing which can not be overlooked. A point that seemed to set them back at the onslaught was the failure to get the tip-off. This was due to the lack of any tall person to fill this position. The guards, who were the "fly in the ointment" of the opponents, deserve mention. They stuck closer than a brother to the opposing forwards, breaking no end of passes, and generally doing a good guarding job.

Sophomore Basketball

BRYAN JOHNSON
Captain

The Sophomore team carried off the basketball championship by a close margin. There was a tie between the Sophomores, Seniors, and Freshmen, which had to be worked off before the victors could be determined. All the games were hard fought, and it took some rigorous playing on the part of the Sophomores to come out at the large end of account. The team has improved in its pass work since its freshman year. In some of the games they got off to a slow start, but they always rallied and exhibited some good playing.

MATTIE PHARR
Captain

Freshman Basketball

As in hockey, the Freshmen came out "en masse." They had an unusually good team, especially when the fact that they had practiced together for only one season is considered. They were in line for the championship at one time, being one of the three teams which were tied for first place. The forwards were almost a sure aim, and proved a menace to all opponents. The guards did some good shadowing, and constantly fed the ball to their forwards. The class' fine spirit in backing the team with cheers up to the last whistle deserves mention.

Tennis

The tennis tournaments this spring promise to be quite interesting. Throughout the year there have been many tennis enthusiasts playing on the courts—even the coldest weather couldn't down some of them. There has been a beginner's class of tennis, the members of which will be in line to compete in the tournaments this spring. These will include both singles and doubles, and the elimination plan will probably be followed.

Archery

Archery has peculiar advantages which are not possessed by many other sports, the development of good posture, grace, and poise. Its romantic history is a feature that appeals to everyone. The many opportunities for continuing the sport after college gives it a social value over most other collegiate sports. This year a large degree of interest in archery has been taken by the freshmen. At all hours of the day, they can be seen going out to arch. Who knows but that some of them will develop into Wilhelmina Tells!

The shadow of the Dome of pleasure . . .

The shadow of the dome of pleasure
Floated midway on the waves;
Where was heard the mingled measure
From the fountain and the caves.
It was a miracle of rare device,
A sunny pleasure-dome with caves of ice!

The real Kubla Khan lives on in the vision of his immortality. "The shadow of the dome of pleasure," floating midway on the waves, suffices to save his soul from nothingness. Yet, perversely, his spirit can still hear the "mingled measure from the fountain and the caves," remnants of the finite world. This life after death was "a miracle of rare device."

Here the fatal interruption occurred in Coleridge's poem. Yet the vision remains, and the wish to bring it to life again. If he could revive that vision, he would understand all, and find the way. This would be so supernatural that mortals would tremble before him, "and all should cry, Beware! Beware!" When he had "drunk the milk of Paradise," he would have gained eternal happiness.

SUPERLATIVES

A damsel with a dulcimer
In a vision once I saw;
It was an Abyssinian maid,
And on her dulcimer she played,
Singing of Mount Abora.
Could I revive within me
Her symphony and song,
To such a deep delight 'twould win me,
That with music loud and long,
I would build that dome in air,
That sunny dome! those caves of ice!

And all who heard should see them there,

And close your eyes with holy dread,
For he on honey-dew hath fed,
And drunk the milk of Paradise.
